

ABSTRACT

A software application running on a local server having one or more associated local storage media and interfacing with a web-server. The application represents data stored in the one or more local storage media in a GUI based on content. The web-server provides the local server with data in a compatible format for the application. The application organizes and presents data received from the web-server on the GUI based on the content of the data provided.